

What are the Benefits of Family Involvement?

Children spend much more time at home than at school.

Their parents know them intimately, interact with them one-to-one, and do not expect to be paid to help their children succeed.

The home environment offers teachable moments that teachers can only dream about.

When parents tutor their children, a significant and immediate change in children's I.Q.

Scores is noted.

Children whose parents are involved have better grades, test scores, long-term academic achievement, attitudes, and behavior .

Parental involvement correlates strongly with school wide achievement and student achievement.

Parents who help their children succeed academically gain a sense of pride in their children and themselves.

Involved parents are strong advocates for the school district.
